Information for students of the Department of Psychology and Cognitive Science.

On behalf of the Department of Psychology and Cognitive Science we are providing you with a few information about your internship.

1) Students who are going to defend their thesis in July or in October:
   - In case of students who have already carried out at least 75% of their internship the internship can be considered as completed and the associated credits gained.
   - Students, who have not carried out at least 75% of their internship yet, are urged to arrange with their internship-tutor alternative work-from-home activities to reach at least the 75% and gain the associated credits.

2) Students who are going to defend their thesis in December or in the following master’s degree sessions:
   - In case of students who have already carried out at least 75% of their internship the internship can be considered as completed and the associated credits gained.

Students who have not carried out at least 75% of their internship yet can carry on with the internship in work-from-home mode or arranging with their internship tutor new, substitute activities. Alternatively they are allowed to suspend the internship for a while and restart it when the situation due the Covid-19 emergency gets better.
